707 Operations’ Weekend Excursion Steams through Dunolly

The impressive ‘City of Melbourne’ steam engine hauled an assortment of vintage railway carriages, on one of the popular excursions organised by 707 Operations. It was barely visible in the dark, apart from the beam of the headlight shining on the track, as it trundled through Dunolly early on Saturday morning. Most of us didn’t get out of bed early enough to witness this special event; however, having been made aware through social media and word-of-mouth that it would return from Sea Lake during Sunday afternoon, several of us braved the cold wind and muddy ground adjacent to Dunolly Railway Station. It proved well-worth the wait, with opportunities for many close-up photos, not to mention being able to experience the nostalgic and haunting sound of the whistle, as the train snaked its way through town.

One Little Duck

On a recent cold, gusty morning, a ball of fluff shrieked its misery to the world as it raced around the back corner of my house. Rebecca reacted very quickly and scooped it away from a very interested dog. It was only then we could see the distressed fluff-ball was a wild duckling. Where it came from and how it got into my backyard alive will remain one of life’s unsolved mysteries. Anyway here it was and the problem was what to do with it. An ice cream container was found and lined with some paper towels and air holes made in the top so it could make the journey to Rebecca’s in safety. But what would happen there where two dogs and two cats were waiting for it was anybody’s guess. After putting out calls for information and suggestions on Facebook, Rebecca was still unsure of her next move, though she did see that worms form part of a wild duck’s diet. A backyard digging expedition uncovered one very unlucky worm which the duckling enjoyed. The next nugget of information said that if you can find a duck with ducklings about the same size as the one you have got, there is a likelihood that the duck will adopt yours. So the search was on for ducklings. Eventually ones the same size were found at the Dunolly Caravan Park lake. After fruitful discussions with the management, Rebecca and Paul took the little duckling down to the lake. It was delighted to be back on the water and immediately started to swim away from the other ducklings. However a mature duck quickly came for it and led the duckling back to the others. The duckling stayed very close to its new parent all the way. "It was such a heart-warming moment" said Rebecca. "It made all that effort worthwhile".

This is a stock photo from the internet.

The big fires in Queensland and NSW are very scary and a worry for our own summer season.

Ad on TV for a competition says: “Win 116 holidays by shopping at WW” I think they meant: “Win one of 116 shopping at WW”.

Love the photo of Donald trying to cheek peck Angela Merkel at the big meeting last week. She had retreated as far as she could without stepping away, and the peck landed on the lady’s left eyebrow.

Sister Ramble and I were watching Mrs Brown’s Boys on the TV with light off in the sitting room and a light on in the next room. I got up to get a coffee, put it on the table beside my chair and sat down. Luckily I sat down slowly instead of the usual armchair flop. As I sat, I felt something lumpy on the seat, and it was warm — THEN I realised that my sister’s very little dog had sneaked in unnoticed in the darkened room and was on the chair. All this took a nanosecond to dawn on me and I actually landed on my knees in front of the chair. Max the dog, calmly jumped down and went to his owner, totally unaware of how close he had come to injury or death (me too, come to that).

There seems to be an increasing fashion for hyphenating names for children, combining both partner’s names. I was wondering what happens if Fred Smith-Jones marries Penny Harding-Grover and has a child. Would this child be named Josh Smith-Jones-Harding-Grover?

Bridging the divide between city and country schools

The Andrews Government has announced a huge funding boost that will double the internet speed of state schools, better support country students and address the disparity between regional and metropolitan schools.

Labor Member for Western Victoria, Jaala Pulford, said an initial $82.8 million funding package will support recommendations from the Expert Advisory Panel into Rural and Regional Students.

The package provides $45.2 million to address teacher supply issues outside Melbourne by attracting teachers and school leaders to state schools in rural and regional Victoria, and supporting them to stay. This includes $12.5 million towards offering the best teachers up to $50,000 to relocate to country areas to fill hard-to-staff positions, as well as a range of non-financial support to assist with relocation. Teachers will also be eligible for retention payments of up to $9,000 per year in their first three years if they remain in these roles.

More than $37 million will go to a range of initiatives to improve educational outcomes for rural and regional students, including:

- $13.2 million to enable rural and regional students to attend VCE revision lectures in Melbourne, saving students up to $1,000 on registration, travel and accommodation costs
- $7.8 million to expand professional development for teachers and leaders in rural and regional areas
- $5.1 million to support rural and regional schools to work in clusters to strengthen curriculum delivery
- $3.7 million for outreach and virtual programs – such as the John Monash Science School Rural Exchange Program – for regional and rural schools
- $3.7 million to abolish the enrolment fees for Virtual School Victoria for all Victorian students, saving around 4,400 parents $160 for the cost of their children accessing virtual learning
- $2.5 million to increase access to mentoring, role models and information about post-school pathways
- $1.4 million for Victoria’s Tech Schools to host and offer STEM programs for regional and rural students

In addition, the Government will invest $8.9 million in the STEM Catalyst initiative to provide teachers in regional in rural areas with further training in mathematics and science and up to $2.1 million for employment-based programs to attract high-achieving graduates into the teaching profession in rural and regional areas.

On top of these initiatives, the Labor Government will also invest $59.9 million to double internet speeds at state schools across Victoria. The Government will also help families experiencing financial hardship with an extra $22.1 million for the Affordable School Uniforms Program, $1.3 million for the Glasses for Kids Program, and $160.9 million for the Camps, Sports and Excursions Fund.

Ms Pulford said the investment is the first step in addressing the expert panel’s findings and recommendations.

“Every student, no matter where they live, deserves to have access to a great local school and a great education. We are getting on with the job of bridging the divide to ensure country kids have the same opportunities as city kids,” Ms Pulford said.

It is fascinating to sometimes read about people's earliest memories when very young. I have spoken to more than one person who can remember a single incident when they were a baby, perhaps only one year old. Obviously it must have made a huge impression on such a young mind. For me my earliest memory was an incident when I was three. I was standing at the front gate with my older brother, waiting for our mother to take us out. I remember suddenly noticing my brother Henry jumping around and shouting loudly. I thought he was dancing and began to laugh. It turned out he had been stung by a bee. I have no other memories of that time in my life because the next thing that comes to mind is after we moved to a different house, so I know that was the only single memory living in the previous place.

Later on, I can recall Mrs McDonald, our housekeeper/nanny when I was about five or six, because I remember her having my brother and me in fits of laughter when she showed us how to play the bagpipes. She would hold her nose, strike her throat in quick rhythm and let out a strange, loud whining noise. Of course we had to drive our parents mad imitating Mrs. McDonald. Once, when I was nagging her to plait my hair when she was busy, I decided to do it myself, but my father lost patience and picked up a pair of scissors and chopped off my straggly plaits. Mother was not at all pleased, but I was thrilled.

After Mrs. McDonald moved on and another baby boy appeared in our house, my mother engaged a daily cleaning lady. This lady often brought her five-year-old son. He was a little terror and would run round the house yelling cowboy whoops and usually woke the baby. The lady so intimidated my mother she became too nervous to sack her, so finally she sent my father around to her house one evening to give her notice. When he told her, the lady said: "Well your kids aren't exactly out of the top drawer." We never stopped quoting that phrase of hers for years.

The scariest of the people coming to our house was the window cleaner. He was a very jovial, friendly man but rather overbearing and one day mother came outside to see the window cleaner sitting on the veranda with five year old me on his knee. She wasn’t impressed, but being a young mother, had not acquired the firm, no-nonsense manner that came later. For the next planned window cleaning day my mother decided to leave a note telling the man his services were no longer required and then not answer the door, pretending she was out. Window cleaner duly arrived and read the note, then started ringing door bell. No answer, so he started looking through the windows and guess who went and twitched a curtain to peep out at him. Me of course! Then a note came under the door: "I know you are home because I saw your little girl at the window". Now quite frightened, my mother herded us into the shower where no one could see in and anxiously waited till the man finally went. Once more poor father had to go and visit our erstwhile window cleaner to warn him of the consequences of frightening young families, but no doubt he paid him off.

Times have certainly changed and I don't have any of those problems because anyone who does jobs nowadays is always welcome to sit down for a chat and a cuppa.

Flowing not Fighting – Living Well with Dementia

This is a space for writing directly for those who are living day to day experiencing memory loss and other challenging brain changes.

3. REMAINING SMARTLY DRESSED

Seventeen items of clothing — SEVENTEEN! Yes, that is correct. What is more, I am certain there were hundreds of people watching the AFL game in Ballarat who had just as many items of clothing on.

It took several days to line up all those items, in the order in which they were to go on, on a spare bed. Putting them on was relatively stress-free then, as it did not end up with pants on and no underwear yet, as occurs most mornings.

Factors which make dressing difficult

Firstly, dressing is one of the first things that happen in your day. Many of us are just nowhere until a shower and coffee help us realise we are still on planet earth. To attempt to put on any more than a pair of socks, requires quite a lot of consideration.

There are three holes in undies and two legs and a body that must pass through the right holes. That gives you a one in nine chance of getting the right part in the right hole.

Secondly, order is so important. Trying to pass shirt buttons through their appropriate buttonholes may require your glasses, which you took off to pull on a tight skivvy, but you are unaware of that and where did you place those glasses anyway? Mirrors are not useful. Alzheimer’s brains do not do reflections well.

Disorder in dressing was one of the two of reasons I went to see my GP about brain behaviour. Repeatedly taking garments off and on to achieve underwear under and outside wear outside, was exhausting and stressful. The other major reason for calling attention to my behaviour, was uncertainty of my car driving consciousness.

Thirdly, clothing seems to have powers of reproduction. Youngest granddaughter must have 30 pairs of socks, all the ‘hand-me-down’, socks for this sport, or that activity. Retailers beg us to buy more shoes, scarves, to colour match our main garments and there we are with a plethora of clothing items.

Winter has been particularly difficult for dressing, as is noted from the AFL at Ballarat clothing extravaganza.

Storage and display

Two important points on clothing storage:

1. It is better if all clothing items are displayed. So often the sight of a garment will prompt memories. As soon as I see a garment, I recall the source of the garment, even the knitting pattern I used or whether it was a “hand

2. Reduce the number of clothing items to three or four of each item. Hanging in our dressing room or placed in the wire see-through baskets (the same as you use to store vegetables) or on open shelving, are the garments which I require in cool cold weather. On a day in late spring, I’ll swap to my warm/hot weather garments, which are currently stored elsewhere. Fewer items of clothing enable me to speed up clothing selection. As mentioned, many times in this column: when all is clearly displayed before you — stress gone!

You have heard of ‘see thru’ garments, well our dressing room is ‘see all garments’.

Next week’s Alzheimer’s Column will be about vision, hallucinations and special perception. Please feel free to add to this column, from your own experience.

At our meeting held last week, many issues were discussed, including Council’s decision to downgrade the Maryborough Aerodrome’s status to an Aircraft Landing Area. We believe this matter to be of great concern and importance for several reasons, due to insufficient public consultation, apparent short notice given to the Aero Club, the possible future implications for both the Aerodrome and Maryborough and more. We have since written a letter to Council, expressing our concerns and requesting further clarification of the process which had been involved in arriving at their decision. Some discussion took place on a comparison between the rates notices for this and the previous year, with slight differences noted.

Mention was also made of the recent public meeting by PMAV, where clarification had been given as to the differences between the push for World Heritage status for parts of the Victorian Goldfields and the VEAC proposal, which has already been sent to the State Government. Several thousand signatures have been collected on a petition against the closure of parts of the bush, with this being presented at Parliament House during the recent rally by Bush Users Groups United. It was also reported that some of our members had recently attended a Q & A session for Go Goldfields at the Bull and Mouth Hotel, where the mid-year report was released.

Our next meeting is to be held on Tuesday 1st October, at 7.30pm, at the Community Hub, Burns Street, Maryborough. You do not have to be a member to attend, everyone is welcome. Please come and have your say and help us to make a difference within the community. Any questions can be addressed to us at: cgoldratepayers@mail.com or to PO Box 184, Maryborough, 3465. You can also find us on Facebook.

A four-year-old was in church with his mother when the wine and wafers came around. His mother whispered that he was too young to understand and was not allowed to take Communion.

Later, the collection plate stopped in front of him. His mother tried in vain to coax the coin out of his clenched fist. In a loud voice he yelled, “If I can’t eat, I won’t pay!”

Bandit and I would like to thank everybody for their generous support during Pawgust.

Together we raised more than $500 – not bad for a small town! While we didn’t get out walking as much as we would have liked, it was still wonderful to be part of such a huge campaign.

Pawgust raises money for Guide Dogs Australia each August. Did you know:
Every hour of every day, an Australian family learns that their loved one will have severe or permanent sight-loss.
Nine of these Australians will eventually go blind. It is estimated that there are more than 450,000 Australians who are blind or have low vision and this number is expected to raise to significantly increase with an ageing population.

This year, nearly $1 million was raised by generous people all over Australia. People just like you, who gave what they could afford. And, every little bit added up!
They are still taking donations until the end of September, so if you would like to make a contribution go to: https://www.pawgust.com.au/fundraisers/sueday
Thank you once again all your generous support.

Around school this week

TEETH ON WHEELS
Next week the Teeth on Wheels van will be at school again. If you gave consent for your child to visit the van earlier in the year, they will automatically be seen again this visit as it is valid for 12 months. If you DO NOT wish for your child/ren to be seen this visit please notify the school prior to Tuesday 10th September.

HEAD LICE
We have conducted a whole-school check in the past week. Please continue to be vigilant with checking your child’s hair, particularly if they were identified as having some this check. One missed egg can start the cycle all over again.

EDUCATION SUPPORT STAFF APPRECIATION DAY
Today has been Education Support Staff Appreciation Day. We have amazing ES staff in our school who ensure our kids have the best possible care and all needs are met. They do many behind-the-scenes tasks that go unnoticed and go above and beyond on excursions and camps.

THE WUNDERFOL PEOPLE: TERMINA & DAVID
With both our junior netball teams narrowly missing spots in the grand final, what a terrific end to the season! Under 11s

Well what an end to the season! Our very proud coach couldn’t have asked for much more from these awesome kids who gave their hearts until the last second in their preliminary final. They lost to Royal Park in a great game, but Park was too steady in the end and we wish them well in the GF. Mia, Cooper and Grace were tight in defence getting many deflections, Brianna ran all day in the centre getting many turnovers, Eden and Charley were an option in attack and Charlotte and Hannah did a great job in goals against quality defenders. A huge thanks to the parents, supporters and the League for the competition. Most importantly thanks to the kids for always giving 100%. #wellwasone #2020 here we come!

Under 13s

The 13s played in the preliminary final this week and came up against the unbeaten Rovers team. Things were a bit shaky for Dunolly in the first quarter, with a few of the balls being thrown out of court. When the second quarter started, everyone adjusted to the game and started putting in 100% effort. Everybody played their roles perfectly, and showed encouragement to every single one of their teammates on the court. Not one person dropped their head throughout the game and everyone stayed determined to keep up the intensity and make Rovers fight for the win. Rovers ended up taking the hard-earned win on the day, and we wish them luck for when they play in the Grand Final. Even though Dunolly lost, everyone walked off the court with a massive smile on their face, knowing they played an amazing game, and I could not be prouder of all the little pocket rockets for their efforts and dedication to the games each week. Well done on an awesome season!

Now that the season is over we would like to send personal thanks to our awesome coaches for the year. The hard work and dedication behind the scenes is somewhat often overlooked and coaching is no easy feat. Your patience, wisdom and leadership has made our netball club all the better in 2019 and we look forward to what 2020 can bring.

- Under 11s — Katie Lovel
- Under 13s — Caitlyn Ray
- Under 17s — Lara Metelmann and Hannah Kenny
- C Grade — Marie West
- B Grade and A Grade — Ashlee McClelland.

Also our netball teams couldn’t run without our netball president Lara, and the netball committee who backs her up week in and week out; along with our dedicated, super supportive and much-loved president and netball superstar Ashlee Lierich. What an executive team!

Good luck to all teams in the Grand Final this coming weekend and enjoy the off season, ready to come back bigger and better in 2020.

In The Veggie Patch

September is the month to start sowing and planting out in the veggie garden if the weather permits. A few nice fine days gives us gardeners the inspiration to prepare for the spring sowing and planting out. This month is still too early to sow the main crop of carrots. Good growing weather in the late spring time or early summer could force a fair percentage of them to bolt to seed.

 Parsnip sown this month or next month usually results in a good crop for next year’s use. Onion plants need to be in the garden this month. If left until the warmer months, a fair percentage of the plants could brown off. Plant in deep friable soil, prepared with lime and complete fertiliser so they can develop deeper roots and better bulbs. Onions need nitrogen for rapid growth. Avoid adding animal manure as it could encourage development of the onion maggot, especially during cool damp weather.

Greenfeast peas sown this month will grow rapidly and be ready to harvest in December. They're very good bearsers and even a small sowing will give very good results. The stalks make good mulch and the space is available for another variety of veggie.

For frost-tender plants, tomato, capsicums and the pumpkin family, sow seeds in containers and the plants can be transplanted when the risk of frosts are much less. It is wise to have a later sowing in containers. If the first plantings get frosted, then there are the later ones to take their place. If the later plants are not needed, so much the better; it is only the loss of a few seeds. Soak tomato seeds in lukewarm water for 4-6 hours to help seeds germinate.

A small sowing of potatoes can go in the soil this month. They take three weeks to emerge and can be covered over if a frost is forecast. Potatoes like a rich, but well drained soil. Plant your potatoes about 10cm deep and 30cm apart, leave about 80cm between each row. Sprinkle with some blood and bone and water in well. Keep moist, but not wet.

Fruit Trees

Now is the time to trim up lemon trees. Cut out any sickly-looking limbs at the base. If a lemon tree is nice and healthy, just leave it.

Happy Gardening

An Orkney Report

What is an article about Orkney doing in The Welcome Record? Having temporarily relocated to the other side of the world for just over five months, it was suggested we might like to report back home from time to time!

Where and what is Orkney? Orkney is a group of 70 islands that lie 10kms off the northern coast of Caithness, Scotland. The 59th parallel of northern latitude passes through the middle of the islands making it just seven degrees (7°) from the Arctic Circle! You may well shiver at the thought, but Orkney has a moderating influence on its climate in the form of the Gulf Stream, making it a little warmer than most other places of similar latitude.

We have come to Orkney to spend some time with our son, Steve, his wife and their three children who have been living here since January. Steve is the head teacher of two Orkney schools, Hope and Burray Community Schools, on the two neighbouring islands of South Ronaldsay and Burray. It's not as inconvenient as it sounds; the islands are only a few hundred metres apart and are joined by a causeway. Of the twenty inhabited islands of Orkney, five are linked by causeways. The others are accessible by regular ferry services and by light plane.

After four weeks in Orkney, we are just starting to get to know the locals and get into the rhythms of Orcadian life. We are renting a house down the road from our son, on one of the many farms that form the mainstay of the economy here.

To paint a picture of this place it is necessary to fill in a few background facts. The islands sit on red sandstone that was once part of an ancient lakebed. Over the sandstone sits rich topsoil, deposited by glaciers many thousands of years ago. The topsoil is 20 metres thick in places so the islands are very fertile. The grass here would have any Central Victorian farmer turn green with envy. It is thick, lush and never seems to stop growing. This amazing grass supports Shetland cattle and sheep, stocky, hardy breeds that can weather the wind and cold in these latitudes. The fields are also full of healthy-looking barley crops which are turning brown and look ready to harvest. Orkney has its own variety of barley called bere barley that has been grown here for thousands of years and is the main ingredient for one of the island’s famous products, whisky!

The islands are small and on our island of South Ronaldsay you can see the sea from almost every house and field. The views are amazing and the skies are always changing. The cliff tops and laneways are full of wildflowers; there are flocks of birds wherever you look; the air is fresh; there is almost no traffic on the single lane roads which wend their way across the islands, and life is attuned to the weather and the farming seasons. Sounds idyllic? Well Orkney has been voted Britain’s most liveable place each year since 2013, so it’s true!

How’s the weather? Well so far — very changeable. What you wake up to in the morning is almost never what you go to bed with at night! The rain and wind have been kind to us so far but we know that things will get much worse before we head for home. Some more facts: Orkney gets between 850 and 940mm of rain a year with rain falling on 188 days, so it’s a pretty wet place. The average temperature for August is 16°C with the record highest temperature being 25.6°C, so not much chance of sunstroke! However it has been warm enough to paddle in the North Sea and Steve does go for a dip most mornings! With the water temperature at 12°C in summer, swimming is not recommended however.

Like farmers the world over, the locals are not happy with the weather this summer: apparently it’s been too wet and there is just too much grass. Perhaps they could export some to Dunolly!
